SAD44 budget meeting

Voters lop off $.5 million

By ALISON ALOISIO

Angry voters Monday cut $500,000 out of a proposed $7.4 million SAD44 school budget.

By a vote of 284-159, they chopped the gross budget from $7,411,527 to $6,911,527. The proposed figure would have meant an average $48 tax increase on a $50,000 house, according to district figures.

The evening belonged to former Bethel selectman Pat Doon and her supporters. Doon and Greenwood selectman Marie Bartlett had urged people to get out and vote. And turn out they did, arguing passionately against salary increases and what they said was wasteful spending by the district.

After the motion to cut was made

'We can't afford your budget anymore, so if teachers have to be laid off, so be it.'

by Doon, Sam Chittick of Greenwood demanded that Supt. Ron Jenkins cite the state law that gives the School Board the right to negotiate contracts prior to approval of money from voters. Employees received raises averaging from 3 to 5 percent.

Jenkins said he could not cite the law, but said the employees did have the right by law to negotiate. He then went on to say the district has a limited pool of teachers to draw on in hiring, and a competitive pay scale was needed to ensure good ones could be hired. He said teachers would have to be cut if the funding was reduced.

That opened up the floodgates. Board member Fran Head of Bethel, a member of the negotiations committee, said she had argued in favor of a zero percent increase during the negotiations process, "but I was told we were probably not negotiating in good faith to go in and ask for no raises," she said.

Bartlett told directors they had to consider people's ability to pay for the budget.

"You have to listen to these people. We're paying the bills. There is a voice out here and I hope you will listen to it," she said.

Selectman Joe Madigan of Andover agreed. "We've had higher

The School Board is scheduled to meet tonight at 7 p.m. in the Telstar library to discuss where cuts can be made.

Several directors said after the meeting that everything in the budget is potentially up for consideration.

"When you have to take $500,000 out, anything is on the table," said Linda Gamble of Bethel.

She said she had received one call prior to the meeting from a Bethel resident suggesting that the Andover Elementary School be closed if cuts had to be made.

Andover director Sid Pew did not want to comment specifically on possible implications for the Andover school, saying only "everything is on the table."

Margaret Hand of Woodstock said she hoped people would come to the board meeting and "tell us where to make cuts where it won't affect teachers and programs."

Chairman Merton Brown of Bethel said Tuesday that in looking for cuts, "I will stay away from as many teaching positions as possible."

He urged administrators to bring a Telstar elevator into compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, and non-instructional activities as examples to look at.

Brown and fellow Bethel director John Brown both said they thought the district would survive the budget cut.

SURROGATE MOTHER AND NESTING SITE—Becky Simmons (above) and her mother Lorena, both of Andover, are raising four abandoned baby bluebirds. The mother bird had built a nest in a birdhouse located on a pole in Lorena's back yard. About two weeks ago, the pole fell down. The babies survived the fall, but the mother abandoned the nest. The young birds were very weak when the Simmons found them. "They had stopped peeping. We had to pry their beaks open to feed them bread soaked in milk," Lorena said. They are now doing quite nicely on a diet of Purina Cat Chow and mashed worms. The Simmons' next step is to find out if they can eventually be released into the wild. For now, they're content to fly around the living room and land on people's heads. (Photo by Alison Aloisio)

Greenwood manager-search funds rejected

By ALISON ALOISIO

At a well-attended town meeting in March, Greenwood voters easily passed an article authorizing the selectmen to find and hire a town manager.

But at a poorly attended special town meeting last week, a town opponents of the town-manager concept put the hiring process on hold—at least for the moment.

The March vote to go ahead with the changeover was 45 to 27. No money was allocated at the time, because the figure suggested in the warrant ($22,000) was for a manager's salary and benefits. Voters decided there was no need to vote on those funds because they wouldn't be needed until March of 1996, when a town manager was slated to begin work.

'I don't believe the majority want a town manager.'

For those the selectmen went to the voters asking $4,200 to pay expenses of conducting a search for a manager.

11 voters who turned out -- most of them long-term opponents of the switchover -- turned the request down, by a vote of 12-7.

The town's selectmen accounted for three of the seven affirmative votes.

Opponents indicated that more than the money was at stake.

"I don't believe the majority want a town manager," said Herbert Dunham.

Sam Chittick, who had opposed the change all along, agreed. "I don't think there was a fair representation when they voted on it. I think we should undo what is a wrong," he said of the March meeting.

Chittick said he had been out of town at the time of the March vote.

Shortly after discussion began on the funds, selectman Harry Swan said, "It enough people have changed their minds (on hiring a manager) since March, they could get up a petition to undo the vote."

But last week's meeting provided no real evidence that anyone had changed their minds on the matter.

Greenwood's new monument will stand where it is, and Greenwood's Vietnam veterans want the new statue on it as veterans of America's other wars and the Korean conflict.

A proposal to move the monument to the Fiske Mills Legion Post was quickly defeated at last week's special town meeting.

The decision, out of discussions between Post representatives and selectmen, Traffic noise during Memorial Day services, as well as the expected widening of Route 20, were reasons given to relocate the monument. The plan also called for building the names of Vietnam and Persian Gulf veterans to a new plaque.

But voters attending the meeting didn't want the monument to go anywhere.

"I'm very upset about this. It's always been in the center of town. My husband has taken care of it for the town. I like seeing it there. They can have their program at the Legion Hall. Build another monument down there and put you guys' names on it, but leave it (the present one) there," said Phyllis Coolidge.

C. Mellen Kimball agreed. "Roy Morgan built that years

THE ANDOVER LIBRARY draws people both for its books and its architecture. "It was noted in the Boston Globe a few months ago as an interesting place to visit. We have hikers from the Appalachian Trail who come by," said librarian Carol Littlehale. She said many people are surprised by the beauty of the library's interior. Assistant librarian Grace Simmons said, "A lot of people say they like the smell of it."

The inside walls are made of brown ash matched boards. The book collection numbers 10,000. With this year's Olde Home Days theme "The Magic of Books," in recognition of the bicentennial of the library association, Littlehale has planned several events for Aug. 5. At 2 p.m. Ann Arbor will read selections from her novel in progress entitled "About Time," the story of a young woman who grew up in a papermill town in Maine. From 3 to 3:30 Arbor and John Rosenwald, both poets, world travelers, and storytellers, will tell collaborative tales of their experiences in China. Throughout the day, World War II memorabilia will be on display throughout the library.

Andover Library Association celebrates 200 years of reading

Andover's unique library is celebrating the bicentennial of its association this year.

Some of the town's first settlers formed the association in 1795. When they "went to their new homes in the vast wilderness, it was a natural instinct to have with them as solace some memorials of the past, the most prized of these being books," notes the town history, "Andover: the First 175 Years."

Free scenic flights for kids

Bethel Air Service will offer free airplane rides on Thursday, Aug. 10 to the children of families in the SAD44 area.

BAS co-owner Dan Bilodeau said the offer is the result of Monday evening's school budget meeting, which drove home the realization that many families are in tough financial shape and can't afford relative luxuries such as airplane rides.

"It would be our pleasure to make a child's day," Bilodeau said.

Rides will be over the town of Bethel and will begin at 9 a.m. They will be on a first-come, first-served basis.

For more information call 824-4321. The rain date is Aug. 11.

Seventy-five books were purchased initially, and citizens borrowed regularly for 30 years. But interest declined after that, and the association dissolved in 1843.

Renewed interest in reading in the late 1800's led to the 1892 addition of a room in the town hall for a library.

The librarian received $1.50 per week in 1893. The two-cent-a-day fine for overdue books is still in existence.

Alice Thurston was librarian from 1925 to 1948. "Mrs. Thurston was not a young woman and lived on a farm in North Andover, well over a mile from town; many times in summer and winter she walked that distance with her lunch and books in a basket over her arm," said the town history.

In 1948 the library was moved to the former Universalist Church. Improvements to the building have made it more usable for community organizations.

Building unusual

The former church was built in 1903. As described in the town history, "The building is a lively octagon."

You enter a small vestry with leaded windows, go up a few steps and into a large room with a cathedral ceiling, all finished in the natural brown ash wood, from which hangs a huge wrought iron chandelier with many oil lamps. There are more stained glass windows on each side of the eight angles -- this was the church proper. Downstairs in the basement is a small kitchen with a wooden sink which, to this day, is water-tight, and a large room in which social functions were held.

The Andover Public Library is the last 19th century building of the octagonal design in Oxford County, and is listed in the National Historic Society Register.

Democracy's seldom 'no-sweat'

The past week has provided a convincing demonstration of the difference between democracy awake and democracy asleep.

Two similar situations, but two very different results. In SAD44, feelings clearly ran strongly against the tax increases called for in the School Board's budget proposal. Strongly enough that more than 400 voters turned out for the district budget meeting, where they suffered the heat and often repetitive arguments, then cut the budget back by half-a-million dollars.

By showing up, sweating the meeting out and voting, those residents flexed their democratic (small "d") muscles and enforced the will of the community.

Greenwood voters did the same in March. They showed up in strong numbers for the annual Town Meeting, where they indicated clearly they were ready to move on to a town-manager form of government.

Monday's school-budget vote was convincing -- nearly two to one. So was Greenwood's town-manager vote.

But last week in Greenwood, democracy nodded off, and the intent of the majority was thwarted.

Town selectmen had called a special Town Meeting to appropriate a modest sum of money for conducting the town-manager search in a professional manner, but those residents who supported the proposal in March (including this writer) saw no need to attend.

By this default, we allowed a small group of determined town-manager opponents to derail the hiring process. The funding vote provided the opponents with the means, but the motive was no less than a simple unwillingness to respect the political wishes of their fellow townspeople.

Last November, many people think, a similar thing happened in our national elections. Most voters couldn't be bothered, but a small number of well-organized right-wing groups turned out the vote in massive numbers -- and inflicted on us an extremist Congress whose actions and intentions go far beyond the wishes of most Americans.

If that is indeed the case (and not just liberal wishful thinking), then more power to those groups -- frightening as that thought is. They played the game by the rules and won. Now they are enjoying the spoils, and the rest of us cope with the consequences.

Our individual analysis of such votes tends, no doubt, to be partisan, and a reflection of which side of the outcome we find ourselves on winners see the will of the people made manifest, losers see the tyranny of a crazed minority.

But in the case of last week's local votes, we can probably all agree on one thing -- they demonstrate convincingly that democracy is not the political system for slackers and no shows.

"Agree," and remember. MRD

MLT FUNDRAISING UNDERWAY

To the Editor:

Mahosic Land Trust's fundraising campaign to purchase the Intervale Gateway is off to a great start. We're almost halfway there, with the Betterment Fund's matching grant. But we still need $15,800 in order to close on the land Sept. 1.

I appeal to all the Bethel residents and visitors who support this project to send their tax-deductible contributions by Aug. 21. There are many ways you can contribute: one donor has given us stocks that we will sell. A donation of appreciated securities can result in significant tax savings to the donor. Please call us for details on this and other charitable giving possibilities.

LOCAL THEATER GROUP

To the Editor:

Very soon citizens of Bethel will receive a mailing asking for financial support for the presentation of the Broadway musical "1776" in July of next year. Because it has been so long since a local theater group has existed, we find ourselves starting from square one, and because also this is to be largely a community project for the town bicentennial, we truly need community support and involvement.

For those not familiar with the production, it gives a powerfully candid and sometimes very humorous account of the furious debates and politics that resulted in the signing of the Declaration of Independence. At the Congress, a sizable number of delegates believed separation from England was pure insanity and, led by John Dickinson of Pennsylvania, they bitterly fought the resolution for independence being led by John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, and Thomas Jefferson. Most importantly, all of the famous names are brought out of rigid idealism and are made human again, to the point where you may ask yourself if much has really changed after all.

We all know how it ended, thus the real story is how it happened. As chair of the 1776 committee, I ask that if you believe a revival of community theater will benefit the greater Bethel area then please consider our sincere request with many thanks.

age. A maple tree was set out, and since a Christmas tree," he said.

Gordon Morgan said, "My father donated his legwork to build a fieldstone monument. Otherwise it would have been wood."

Sylvia Dunham said that people wouldn't drive out of town to see a new monument unless they had loved ones on it.

Viet vets want recognition

Earl Tyler, commander of the legion post, said Vietnam veterans did not like an earlier proposal to list their names on the back side of the present monument.

"There are 40 of them in town, and they feel that to put them on the back doesn't serve the justice they feel they deserve," he said.

Replying to the comments in opposition to moving the monument,

Tyler said, "It's not that we want to take something away from the town. Five thousand dollars was raised five years ago to fix the monument and add the names. But year after year nothing happens. Maybe this is a way to have it happen. It's about time for Locke Mills to honor the veterans the same as they did for World War II."

Tyler said the Vietnam veterans have been trying for 20 years to get the town to do something for them.

Those who spoke in favor of keeping the monument in the center of town favored adding the names.

"If your main objective is adding the names, then build a new one with the names side by side," said Dunham.

Selectman Harry Swan estimated it would cost in excess of $10,000 to add to the monument. Tyler had quoted a figure of $5,700 for the legion post plan, with the legion picking up part of the tab.

It was suggested that a committee be appointed to come up with a new design on the Route 26 location.

The proposal to move the monument was defeated, with only the selectmen voting in favor of it.

Selectmen chair Marie Bartlett said after the meeting that while the $5,000 had been available for several years to repair the stone, the work had been delayed by several changes to the list of new names.

Other articles

At last week's meeting voters also approved $4,250 to buy a hopper/sander to go on the town's one-ton truck. Several "housekeeping items" in town ordinances were also approved.

Porking Public Broadcasting

By MIKE BROWN

Why do Maine farmers raise the kids on farms? Probably because they are there. But never mind the high mountain analogy, the Maine Public Broadcasting Corporation has received another half-million-dollar slab of taxpayer pork bellies hoping to find that elusive rural answer.

The federal USDA grant of $515,000 will, according to MPBC's $57,000 spokesman Russell Peotter, provide the bucks to "broadcast live from county fairs, trade shows and other rural events that celebrate rural life."

That ought to spike the rumor once and for all why Maine farmers are Maine farmers still -- county fairs.

Maine Public Broadcasting is always scurrying about its public-supported $10-million acreage trying to find more hay for its 125-herd of employees. It takes half a silo of greenbacks to feed this bunch every year.

But Public Broadcasting has found a cash cow in the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, which granted a half million in 1993 to train child-care workers (for farm-chore kids?) and a cool million in 1994 for some kind of rural science project as yet hatched. Want to bet that most of this money went for MBPC personnel salaries and benefits?

There are only some 40,000 milk cows in Maine. Why not divvy up the USDA grant giving each farmer $13 for each milker. They, rather than MPBC folks, could spend it on fried dough at the county fairs.

Public broadcasting has been on a public relations binge ever since the Republican Congress started plowing its weedy, overgrown pastures. The Maine PBS'ers have loaded the airwaves with the ballistic hype that "if PBS doesn't do it, who will?" This is a national self-serving, employee-saving PBS campaign saying the big television sky is falling on our heads so cough up the new rafter cash, free-loading viewers like you.

There begs the question of why Maine Public Broadcasting can continue to saturate the public ether with what must be called lobbying activity? On MPBC's 1994 IRS statement it stated a flat "no" to the question of whether the organization has been involved in lobbying activity in an attempt to influence public opinion. What are those ubiquitous, nauseous pledge weeks and PBS doomsday pitches all about -- county fairs?

As a federally designated tax-exempt corporation, MPBC influence lobbying is prohibited or must be reported in exact dollar detail.

Maine public television and radio get some hefty tax dollars from Maine citizens and businesses. In 1994 the Maine Legislature's appropriation was $2,230,156. That was the number requested in Gov. Angus King's budget. King, of course, is an MPBC alumni, and as governor uses the Maine Public Broadcasting system as a personal bully pulpit for his issues and answers.

The governor and legislature did not reduce the MPBC appropriation one cent while all about them were cutting state programs. In fact, it increases in the biennium. So do MPBC salaries and benefits. For instance, its president, Robert H. Gardiner, had his 1993 salary and benefits of $81,791 raised to $96,345 in 1994.

In 1994, five other MBPC employees had salaries and benefits over $50,000 annually. Twenty other employees were over $30,000.

Public broadcasting should not be beheaded, because it does produce unique, quality programs, although broadcast redundancy is boring to the point of click-off. But the nation and Maine do not need to subsidize by public taxes what is essentially government-sponsored media to the extent it has grown over the past two decades.

Public broadcasting is a port accumulator extraordinary. It has influential friends in high legislative and elitist places (but not as many post-Newt). And private corporation ad charity porkers have found a place to take a relief tax write-off and get elitist exposure.

But televising Maine county fairs with public taxes? A shell game. Veteran newsmen and columnist Mike Brown writes regularly on the Augusta political scene. His views are his own and do not necessarily reflect those of The Citizen.)

THIS WEEK AT THE Moses Mason House

Fire Department contract nullified

ANDOVER--Selectmen last week nullified a Fire Department contract to provide fire protection to Bradford Associates' proposed South Arm Road subdivision. In an October letter, fire chief Ken Dixon told Andrew Bradford that the department would supply protection, subject to several stipulations. Noting the subdivision is outside the town's limits, selectman Joseph Madigan said that under state law the fire chief is not allowed to enter any contracts for the town. Selectmen voted unanimously to send a letter to the Land Use Regulation Commission, which has received a subdivision application from Bradford, stating that the board doesn't want to provide protection. The project was also opposed by selectmen in 1992. They said at that time the 42-lot subdivision would have a devastating effect on Black Brook, and would cause additional school and road maintenance costs.

Hanscom named to study committee

NEWRY--Selectman Wendy Hanscom has been asked to serve on a Maine Development Foundation steering committee to study new ways that state, county, and municipal governments can work together to improve services and lower costs. The committee will hold its first meeting Aug. 7. Committee members include state legislators, state commissioners and county and municipal government officials. Those asked to serve include state legislators Jane Amero, Donald Esty, Donald Strout and Jane Saxl; Dept. of Labor Commissioner Valerie Landry, State Planning Office director Evan Richert; Cumberland County commissioner Esther Clenoff, Androscoggin County commissioner Emile Jacques; Sagadahoc sheriff Mark Westrum, Berwick selectman Keith Bowles, Auburn city manager Patricia Finnigan, Fort Fairfield town manager Scott Seabury, and Hanscom.

Branch Road camp burns

NEWRY--A camp on the Branch Road burned to the ground last Wednesday. Deputy fire chief Brad Wight said a neighbor called in the fire at about 5 p.m., but the camp was engulfed in flames by the time the fire department got the call. Wight said the cause could have been a lightning strike or an electrical problem. Firefighters were at the scene for about two and a half hours.

James River jobs escape ax

BERLIN, N.H.--The James River Corp. plant in Berlin will not be affected by Friday's announcement that the company plans to cut 4,440 jobs by the end of 1998, an official said. The Berlin plant is to become part of a new company, Crown Vantage, which will not be affected by the layoffs, said Richard Elder, vice president of corporate communications at the Richmond, Va., headquarters. The Berlin plant, with about 1,200 workers, is the largest private employer in northern New Hampshire.

Pay-per-bag halves (legal) waste

ORONO--Maine communities that charge residents by the bag for waste disposal wind up handling less trash, but the fees also may prompt more illegal dumping and backyard burning. University of Maine researchers say. The researchers compared the amount of waste generated by 29 municipalities that have charged per-bag fees for at least a year with 28 towns that finance their trash collection with property taxes or flat fees. They found that communities that charge by the bag disposed of less than half the waste generated by the other municipalities, on a per-capita basis. Also, solid-waste management cost 24 percent less per year in the towns that charged by the bag -- about $31 per person compared to about $41 for residents of the other communities, they said. But the researchers acknowledged that increases in backyard burning, roadside dumping and illegal use of commercial dumpsters in the per-bag towns may help account for the reduction in the local waste stream. "We don't know whether or not these problems are related to the pay-by-the-bag system," said researcher Stephanie Seguin. "They weren't severe problems, and some towns didn't have any of them. Some said these problems occurred only in the summer or that they had existed all along." More than 50 Maine communities have adopted per-bag fees for trash collection in recent years, requiring residents to buy special bags or stickers. The researchers, whose work was supported by a grant from the now-defunct Maine Waste Management Agency, noted that per-bag fees hit poor and large families the hardest. They said mandatory recycling laws may be a fairer way to reduce the amount of solid waste.

Bridgton curfew in effect

RIDGTON--Voters last week approved a curfew ordinance for youths under 18. The decision to require young people to be off the streets after 11 p.m. was made at a special town meeting. Both parents and offending children would be fined, and the juveniles would be required to perform community service. Some parents protested the ordinance would penalize well-behaved kids for the offensive actions of a few troublemakers. Other residents felt the curfew would address the problem of disrespect and destructiveness among some teenagers.

Get assessment info on computer

AUBURN--Local property information is now directly available to the general public through a computer at the front counter of the assessor's office. Previously the information had to be read from a card by an office employee. Real estate professionals and private citizens doing their own research have shown the most interest in the computer so far, according to assessor Joseph Downey. Information on property includes a map, lot number, location, land size, type and size of property, zone, the owner's name and mailing address, book and page and the date of conveyance. The computer is equipped with a "read only" file, so no one can change the information.

Lake Champlain bike path planned

BURLINGTON, Vt.--A 400-mile bike path around Lake Champlain is moving closer to reality this summer, with volunteers riding the proposed route and providing feedback to the Lake Champlain Bikeways committee. The committee comprises a coalition of bicycle enthusiasts, as well as state recreation and tourism officials from Vermont, New York, and Quebec. It was formed two years ago to promote the idea of an around-the-lake bike route that would use existing, bicycle-friendly roads. Ronald Ofner, chairman of the committee, said bike touring would be welcomed by businesses. The committee has found that many bikers would ride the route a little bit at a time. "They stay in inns, and a lot of them on their travels carry credit cards, buy things at antique stores and have things shipped to their homes," he said.

Humans still trying to outwit bears

TUCSON, Ariz.--Call it a hot spot. U.S. Forest Service officials hope it cures a black bear of his taste for trash. It's a fiery confection -- honey laced with nasty chiles, and it's used to counter a growing campground problem of bears raiding trash and food supplies. Staffers resorted to it last month in the Coronado National Forest. For weeks, a black bear ravaged conventional metal garbage cans. Workers repaired nearly two dozen cans, using doorknobs to try to make them bear-proof. "He beat the cans apart, he got the lids off, he got them open," said Mark South, a staff member. Then they put the hot honey inside several cans. On a heat scale, it rated a 10, South said. "One of our guys heard about it from an old wise-guy guru in Alaska. No one witnessed it, but the bear went for a taste, probably sticking his whole snout inside a can. "We hope his mouth was on fire. He was probably looking for ice cream later," South said. The bear hasn't hit a can in four weeks. Studies in Alaska and Canada have shown hot honey is a somewhat effective deterrent on bears new to garbage-can snacking, but not repeat offenders.

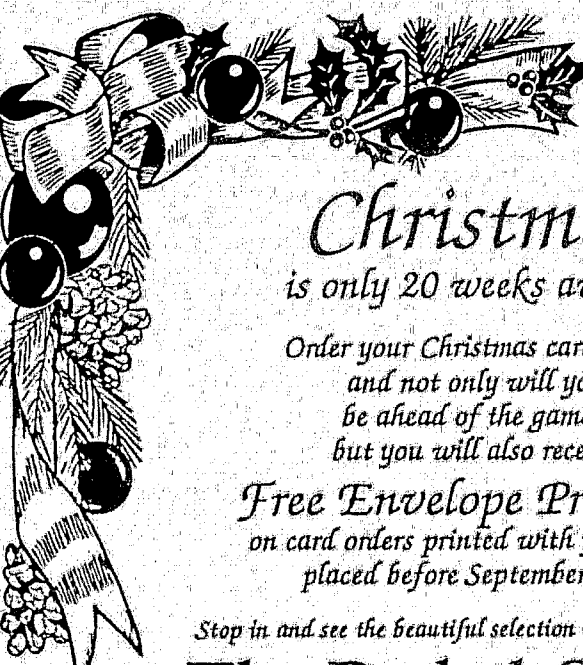

A BOLT OF LIGHTNING struck the pointed fir of Ed and Beth Hitchcock's Pointed Fir Bed and Breakfast last Wednesday. "It split the tree for about 30 feet, and you can see right through the middle of the trunk," said Ed. The force of the strike blew bits of tree trunk all over the yard, for a distance of about 40 feet. "We got some extra kindling out of it, anyway," he said. The Hitchcocks were home at the time the bolt hit. Ed said they heard a loud crack, and when they went outside, they could smell a strong balsam scent. He said the lightning "fried" their answering machine and knocked out the power for a time. They plan to consult a tree expert on whether the fir can be saved, or if it will have to be taken down.

Tips from the Bethel Community Lakes Association

For swimming safety:
-- Tell someone when you go into the water.
-- Swim with a friend; and when beyond 200-foot no boating zone, swim with a boat.
-- Brightly colored bathing caps make you easier to spot from a boat.
-- Rafts are private property. Check with owners before using them.

School budget

amounts of general assistance than we've ever had before," he said of his town.

Don Vautour, a member of the Bethel budget committee, said he knew of a business that had just laid off 14 people. "We can't afford your budget any more, so if teachers have to be laid off, so be it," he said.

Joe Jarvis of Woodstock said he was on a fixed income and had received a 2.9 percent cost of living increase. "The teachers make about $30,000 a year. That's well above the average in this room," he said.

Budget supporters booed

Some budget supporters tried to argue that education was worth the price, and the teachers' salaries were justified by their own education.

"We hold out to our children that education means a better way of life, and encourage them to go to college," Woodstock director Marcel Polak said.

He said if those same students then return home to work, it is reasonable for them to expect to be

'If you can't dazzle them with brilliance, you can buffalo them with bull----.'

RAY HARRINGTON
Greenwood director,

-- regarding the quality of the answers voters were getting from Supt. Ron Jenkins paid in accordance with their schooling. He also said if cuts were made, it would be newer teachers who would go.

Several audience members booed Polak's remarks, and one was heard to comment, "My heart bleeds for you."

Jonathan Goldberg of Bethel said he had just opened a new business, and had a new baby as well. "I took a salary decrease ... but I'm looking to the future. I'm not concerned what I have to pay now. I'm concerned when my daughter enters school," he said.

Goldberg's remarks also drew boos.

Harry Faulkner of Bethel told directors, "We don't think you're spending efficiently ... Stop telling us we're against education -- we're against waste."

George Hayes of Greenwood asked if there was waste to be cut.

Jenkins replied that anything was up for grabs, including computer technology and a planned upgrade to the Telstar library.

Greenwood director Ray Harrington later objected that Hayes question had not been answered.

"As the saying goes, if you can't dazzle them with brilliance, you can buffalo them with bull----," he said. SAD44 bus driver Arlene Bean of Bethel said she thought cuts could be made without hurting students.

"Kids will learn what they want to learn. They go on field trips to apple orchards and cemeteries, and they're not interested. They can learn in a school room. We do need those busses, though," she said. Bean was referring to $94,000 in the budget to purchase two new busses.

At one point Jenkins moved from his place behind the podium to a seat in the audience, and asked to be recognized. He said he was speaking as a citizen of Woodstock on the $500,000 cut.

"If that amount (the $500,000) was something reasonable, I believe I could find it. But I know what it will do to your children."

Jenkins remarks were booed loudly.

Art Marshall of Newry tried to amend the cut to $300,000. His attempt at compromise was easily defeated.

At about 9:30 p.m. Dooen's amendment came to a vote. Its overwhelming approval brought enthusiastic cheering from the audience.

Parent, teacher turnout low

It appeared from the makeup of the audience that relatively few parents and teachers attended the meeting. The breakdown of attendance by town was: Andover 36, Bethel 282, Greenwood 55, Newry 36, and Woodstock 65.

Figures on the tax impact of the reduced budget were not available from the school district at press time. Dooen had calculated savings to individual towns to be: Andover $60,400; Bethel, $164,650; Greenwood, $69,050; $141,350; and Woodstock, $69,550.

NOVA, Adult Ed budgets OK'd

The NOVA adult education and secondary education budgets were approved with local shares of $2,378 and $205,345, respectively. The SAD44 Adult Ed budget local share of $68,351 also passed.

Some questioned why SAD44 couldn't get all adult ed services in cooperation with the Rumford organization. SAD44 Adult Ed director Cathy Newell said the traveling distance would make it difficult for many to participate.

Greenwood manager

-- the voters who spoke out were established opponents of the town-manager proposal, and those who supported the proposal in March simply did not turn out to make their feelings known.

Must now be done on the cheap

If the town-manager search is to move ahead, the selectmen will now have to conduct it without professional assistance.

The selectmen had little success in trying to convince last week's skeptical audience that the $4,200 was needed if they were to conduct the town-manager search in an effective fashion.

Of the $4,200, $3,000 was to have gone to pay for the services of the Maine Municipal Association in advising selectmen during the hiring process; and the balance was for advertising and possible travel expenses. The funds were slated to be taken from the undesignated fund balance.

Selectman chair Marie Bartlett told townspeople that the MMA advice would be useful during the town's first-ever hiring of a manager.

"We don't want to make a mistake and get someone who doesn't work out. Woodstock got into a lot of hot water when they first hired a town manager," she said.

She said the settlement to terminate a poor manager, once hired, could cost the town months of paychecks, even after the person left the position.

But her arguments fell on deaf ears. "I don't see why we have to hire outsiders," Chittick said.

Gordon Morgan agreed. "The selectmen don't want to take responsibility for the job they were elected to do," he said.

Someone asked if the $4,200 would mean more money raised through taxes. Town clerk Phyllis Coolidge said using the undesignated surplus now would mean more to raise in the future "if we keep dipping into it."

Bob Coolidge said he thought the funds should have been considered at the March meeting.

At one point Chittick moved that the article be tabled, in light of the opposition to the decision to hire someone at all.

But moderator Vern Inman said the article had to be acted upon one way or the other.

Al Curtis, a member of the town manager study committee, suggested it be taken up again at the next regular Town Meeting.

Bartlett told those present, "If this isn't approved, we'll have no monies. We've been charged with hiring a town manager. Our hands are tied. We'd have to go back to the people in March and say we didn't do anything."

Slowed, but not dead

But later Bartlett said that despite the setback, she believes the selectmen should press on with the recruitment process.

"I don't think (last week's vote) eliminates our obligation to search. We have to abide by the March vote," she said.

She also disagreed with Chittick's statement that the March meeting was not a fair representation of the town.

"It was one of our largest March turnouts ever," she said.

And selectman Carl Curtis said he thought it was last week's special Town Meeting -- not March's meeting -- that did not provide a fair representation.

Ray Seames, another member of the town manager study committee, and a strong supporter of the proposal, said Friday he thought the March vote had been "very clear."

He said he was unable to attend last week's meeting, and that the lack of funding would now make the selectmen's search more difficult.

"I think they could have at least funded the advertising," he said.

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSIONS ON ENVIRONMENT SLATED

Residents of western Maine are invited to a regional roundtable meeting of the Maine Environmental Priorities Project on Sept. 11 at 7 p.m. at the Cascade Brook School in Farmington.

The meeting will kick off an effort to set environmental priorities for Maine at a series of small roundtable discussions to be held during September.

The Rumford Public Library will be the site of one such discussion on Sept. 18 and 28 from 6:00 to 8:00 p.m.

The discussions are organized by the Maine Environmental Priorities Project, a statewide group charged with ranking Maine's leading environmental concerns. The findings will be reported to the governor, legislature, and state agencies and will serve as a guidepost for future environmental policy.

At the Sept. 11 kick-off meeting, the Project will share technical reports about specific environmental issues with residents.

For more information call 778-0177.

Hart completes Principals' Academy

Daniel Hart, principal of NOVA/Regional 9 in Rumford, has completed the Maine Principals' Academy at the Maine Central Institute in Pittsfield. The Academy is a residential professional retreat for school principals held this year in July.

The Maine Principals' Academy is designed to provide a setting in which practicing administrators can share professional ideas, insights, and concerns. The academy provides opportunities for administrators to reflect on the beliefs and practices that affect their schools. It provides administrators with stimulating learning experiences which will enhance their knowledge and decision-making skills. Components of the program include scheduled time for personal reflection, small group settings for discussing information, development of action plans and team-building activities.

According to Hart, "This program provided me to meet, work closely with, and establish strong connections with 28 administrators, throughout the state of Maine. I came away enthusiastic and impressed with the quality and creativity of this retreat, in dealing with educational reform, its issues and successes."

The Maine Principals' Academy, a professional development opportunity, is currently in its 16th season, supported by the Maine Principals' Association, the Department of Education, and the University System.

As I sat in my lawn swing this afternoon, I scanned the pond and surroundings. The sun was warm, the water lilies peeped from the water surface and a big, blue heron came to fish.

On the rose blossoms I noticed the hummingbird moth. The pretty creature darted away in search of another flower, its long, slender bill suddenly rolled up into a tiny knob under its "chin." One would instantly know it was not a hummingbird for a hummingbird's bill never varies. It is so full of energy and how it loves bee balm, which I have so little of this year. It hovers above the plants hoping they will open soon. How do these birds travel so far in migration, not by land to Yucatan but across the Gulf.

"The hummer has a bill/and feathers neat and trim/The moth, a thread-like/rolled-up tongue beneath/its little chin./In the honeysuckle room/ with wings a dreamy blur/Before a sweet old-fashioned/bloom they poise and/dart and whirl."

Around me stretched the ageless forest, filled with birds, animals, insects, plants, trees, and flowers. Chippy came to visit me as he usually does, when I'm in the swing. He is very tame now, for he sits in my lap to eat his seeds. Of course, the gray squirrels envy him when they see him eating.

In the maple branches above me I could hear restless baby birds anxious to try their wings and to get out into the world. How little they know about the future.

On July 19, the "Tired teachers" met for lunch at Shorelands, then went to Avis Stellhorn's for the afternoon. There were seven of us.

A few evenings ago a beautiful deer came to my lawn and ate apples from my tree.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Immonen, West Paris, visited me one afternoon last week.

I had fresh raspberries from the farm this week. They brought back memories of the days when Clyde had so many plants and there were so many berries to be picked.

Eleanor Inman's granddaughters and other relatives and friends have visited her during the week. She has been unable to work for several days.

I feel much better and have done some walking.

East Stoneham

by Eleanor Nelson

Sharon and Abdul Traish and Aisha, Jaffer and Nawal were at their cottage at Lake Keowaydin this past weekend, also their friends, Iona and Mohammed Huneedy, and Masden, Nardia, Nafisa and Shane from Belmont, Mass. They all enjoyed visiting at the cottage and cool lake before going back to the hot city.

I was just reading other peoples' town items before getting mine ready and wanted to let Shane Billings from North Woodstock know I enjoyed his column in the Bethel paper and shall miss his writings and wish him well in his future college days. You can learn something every day it seems. This time it was from Gil Seeley, who remarked that blueberries contain a substance used in treating diabetes. It helps reduce the sugar in the blood. Guess I'll eat more blueberries.

A Taylor family reunion was held recently in North Lovell, where 68 people gathered for a weekend of family activities and recreation. The reunion was hosted by the Rev. Charles and Donna Lee Fowle of North Lovell. It was the first time that relatives and descendants of Isabel and James Taylor of Bristol Hope, Newfoundland, had come together. They came from Ontario and all over the New England area.

The Kezar Lake Grange accommodated the Taylor clan for meals and worship on Sunday morning. The weekend was highlighted by the planting of the Taylor tree with the oldest member (84) and youngest (nine months) assisting in the activity.

The Kezar Lake Grange at North Lovell will have their annual Chicken Barbecue on Aug. 5. It consists of chicken, corn on the cob, salads, rolls, ice cream and drinks, and it's always good. I believe it starts at 5 p.m. and is $6.

Young people in the near area have had an opportunity this summer to learn about play writing from Susan Willerman, an experienced play writing instructor from Brooklyn, N.Y. This program is sponsored by the Charlotte Hobbs Library, Lovell Village, Matthew Nelson and Sarah Lipiatos are two of the group of 15 students attending these sessions. It gives them an interest in creative process and experience of actually writing a play. They will present a program this Friday, July 28, at 7 p.m. at the Brick Church. It is free and open to the public.

Readers -- keep in mind about the East Stoneham Congregational Church Centennial celebration on Saturday, Aug. 26, starting at 10 a.m. with a homecoming fair with lots of things going on all day: crafts, yard sale, white elephant sale, food sale and face painting and fish pond for the kiddies, a memorabilia table, "Stoneham Remembered," history of East Stoneham book on sale table, raffle of a beautiful quilt handmade by Stoneham residents, and refreshments at noon. Mark it on your calendar and come on over and meet old friends and new ones and have a good two days here in Stoneham.

Gladys Kilgore and Wilma Taylor continue to gain at the Norway Convalescent Home.

Dwight Grover is at Stephens Memorial Hospital recovering from recent surgery. We wish you well, Dwight.

The public Church supper last Thursday was very well attended and there was plenty of food. The next one will be Aug. 3. See you there!

North Woodstock

by Shane Billings

Well, this is it: my last column for The Bethel Citizen as the writing representative of North Woodstock. In just about a month I'll be leaving for college, and there's a lot to do in that time; therefore, I'm turning the pen over to Sue Silver, who will continue updating you on the happenings of "Pinhook." I would like to take this opportunity to thank everybody who has ever said they enjoyed my column; knowing that you liked it has meant a lot to me.

Anyway, on the news of the week, there were three big birthdays in the area. My sister Bridget turned 12 on Tuesday and celebrated by going miniature golfing with our mom. They also enjoyed supper at Shaners and did some shopping. Earlier in the day, Bridget had cake, ice cream, and presents with Louise Chapman, Sue and Joelle Silver, Mom, Jason, and myself.

On Wednesday, Joelle Silver turned five and had her own birthday bash at her house. Guests included Louise and Alan Chapman, Bridget Billings, Kara Jacques, Billy, Tammy, and Ostrey Silver. A good time was had by all.

Also celebrating a birthday this week is my cousin, Carly Cummings, of South Portland. On Sunday, we will be attending a joint birthday for she and Bridget at the Concord Pond camp of Sterling and Irene Mills.

On Saturday, I went to a party at my friend Jenn's. Kim Brown was also there, as were several of our friends from school. We watched movies, listened to music, and talked a lot. It was nice seeing everybody, most of whom I had not seen since school ended.

On Monday, I drove Emma Billings to South Paris for her physical therapy session. On Tuesday, Jason and I accompanied Louise Chapman to Lewiston, where we did some shopping. I was upset that the Walden Books in the Auburn Mall was closed, but it was because they are expanding into another part of the building. Louise had a few things to buy, as she and Alan are planning for an upcoming trip out West to see daughters Sarah and Alison.

Last night, I talked on the phone with my friend Laura, who has just returned from a three-week vacation to Germany.

Well, that's it from North Woodstock this week. Once again, I appreciate all of the kind comments I've received from readers over the past two years. I'm sure you will all enjoy Sue Silver's column and continue to hear all about the happenings of North Woodstock.

South Woodstock

by Andrea Wing

Rosalie Poland, Rick and Lisa Mack enjoyed a trip to New York to attend an Amway convention. While there they visited Niagara Falls. It was a very enjoyable trip.

Saturday night Richard and I went to Kellie Hart's for a cookout for my birthday. Cake and ice cream was served for dessert. We all had a nice visit.

My son, Rick Wing stopped by last Sunday to deliver my birthday presents. He was on his way to play baseball later in the day at West Paris. He plays for the Pine Tree League and seems to be doing better than ever.

Buster Poland is having a sale at the Union Church for short periods of time when it isn't too hot or when he feels up to it.

I think I've heard "Is it hot enough for you" a thousand times this past week. I like the summer but not when it is so hot and humid.

Richard Wing has been installing culverts in the town of Andover this past week. Construction (hot-topping) will start on Route 26 in Woodstock and other areas this next week.

Pete and grandson, Joshua Appleby, went fishing this week and caught their limit in 10" and 12" brook trout. Pete wouldn't tell Richard where they caught them. He said it was a secret. Pete, Laurene and Danielle Appleby and grandson, Joshua went to Vermont to attend a con trial. Of course their dog, Murdoch is with them, also.

I met my next door neighbor, Sheri, this past week. Her dogs got loose and she went down by my house to retrieve them. I didn't get her last name.

Congratulations to Jerrold and Traci Mason on the birth of a daughter, Rebecca Lynn. Rebecca was born on Jerrold and Traci's wedding anniversary.

Larry Billings, curator, Woodstock Historical Society reports that he has given a book on French cooking to the society. Basil Sequin and Mr. Billings have both given some books to the museum. These are mostly on crafts, which many people in the area find interesting. The Billings' family has given some important newspaper clippings and Kathleen Bean recently gave a book on antique glass.

Quote of the Week: "I've learned that I shouldn't go grocery shopping when I'm hungry."

North Newry

by
Gil Seeley

Call to Worship was held at the Newry Community
Church on Sunday, July
23, 9 a.m., by

Pastor Rodney Hanscom at the pulpit and daughter Nancy at the organ. The Message of the Day was: "A Basket of Fruit," from Scriptures Amos 8:1-12. "Thus hath the Lord God showed unto me; and behold a Basket of Summer Fruit." A special was done by Gil Seeley from Psalm 9:18, "For the needy shall not be forgotten, the expectation of the poor shall not perish forever."

Karlene and yours truly spent a delightful day Monday, July 24, at Patty Greig's campsite at Abbott's Anchorage. Also there were Patty's two sisters, Lynda and her husband Ronald York from Bar Mills, and Becky and husband Paul Melchin from Hyde Park, Mass., and Lloyd and Marion York from Scarborough. All the guys spent their time building a dock for Patty and Jack. We all had a great lunch and spent some time at the water's edge watching Becky and Lynda get wet. By the way, Patty, Lynda and Becky are the daughters of the late "Boots" Morton, who passed away a few years ago. It was great to be all together again like old times.

Karlene Bachelder, Betsy Clark, Gil Seeley, Louise Todd, Denis Parent and Irene Hadfield, members of the "Newry Bowling Gang," were at the Oxford Hills Lanes in Newry one day last week while the lanes in Rumford were being repaired. On the overall score, Karlene was high on both the singles and triples. Of the "Highness," there was high on both the singles and triples. Karlene had two spares, Betsy had three spares, Doris and Gil each had one spare.

"Quiz". Why is a gem stone called amethyst? Answer: "Amethyst" is composed of two Greek words meaning "not to be drunk." In ancient times it was believed it would keep the wearer sober. In those days, drinking cups were made of amethyst to prevent the users from getting drunk.

The Woodstock Greenwood Senior Citizens will meet on Thursday, Aug. 3, at the Bryant Pond Grange Hall with a meeting at 11:30 and dinner at noon, put on by the Grange, and program by Ernestine Riley.

The Historical Society has many items of interest both to Woodstock residents and people visiting the area. Its collections are representative of the best things Maine and New England can offer. Visit the museum this summer. Stanley Farrar and other local ball players gave a signed baseball to the society. Curator Larry Billings gave a cookbook to the society. Many different exhibits add much to the museum. The society picnic will be at Evelyn Bean's at 5 p.m. on Aug. 12. The society thanks Mary Bidings and Amelia Barnham for watching the museum. Thanks to all who watch it. Aug. 8 will be History Day at the museum. There will be a flea market, food sale, crafts and items from the museum, such as T-shirts, mugs, note paper, etc. The museum is open each Saturday 1 to 4 p.m. Franklin County 124 will meet Monday, Aug. 7, for Music and Talent Night. This meeting is open to the public and starts at 7:30 p.m. Refreshments will be served. Come join the fun. There will also be a Chinese auction.

Curator Larry Billings has given the Historical Society a rare tin plate with a royal couple on it. This is his gift at the end of the summer season.

Joseph and Maggie Hoyt visited their dad, James Hoyt, Friday to Sunday.

Guests at the Hoyts Saturday were David, JoAnn, Ray and Shawn Crockett, Jim, Joseph and Maggie Hoyt, and Beatrice Farnum.

The East Bethel Church will have a service on Aug. 6 at 7 p.m., with the Rev. Norman Rast conducting the service. Neil Olson will hold his Trapper's Weekend on Aug. 11-12 at his place.

Allan and Diana Howe, with daughters Alyssa and Lisa, Stanley Howe and Grace Howe were in Maryland on July 21-24. They attended the wedding of Jennifer Howe, daughter of Greg and Sandy Howe.

Keith Monahan was in Portland, Ore., on July 13-17 attending the funeral of his uncle. He was the Maine representative and enjoyed it much. While there he visited his son, William and wife Annette in Canton, Mass.

Mary Foster is doing well now. She has been to the Brunswick Maine Theater three times.

Charles Neely and grandson of North Brewer visited his brother, Leslie, recently.

Polly Smith was at Fishing Point, Rumford, from July 16-24. While there she visited her friends, Connie, Margaret and family.

Walter, Yvonne and daughters, Talyan and Madeline enjoyed a wonderful visit last weekend in Portland with their family and friends.

The planning board scheduled for Friday brought out only two members.

These two returned home when the other three made a no-show.

Bear hunters are around staking claims for baiting stations.

The Ladies' Aid met Tuesday to work on projects. Elsie Fuller was presented two birthday cakes from Pauline Lavallee and Simonne Lavallee.

During a chance visit with Glenn Abbott, Glenn revealed that he had come to visit me earlier. As he drove along Backstreet he said to himself, "Why does that crazy old woman live way off up here?" When he stopped at the end of the driveway, he said, "Now, I know why." He spent some time in my dooryard enjoying the scenery and peaceful atmosphere before he gave up waiting for me to come home.

Locke Mills

by Lorraine Mills

It is really disconcerting to find you know more people from a 1908 column than you do from a 1995 one. Not that I was living back then you understand, but when you see where someone was visiting your grandfather (Frank Flint) and your mother was 13 days shy of her fourth birthday, it somehow compresses time. I am curious as to who these people were but have no one living now that would know. I don't think I also saw where Elsie Flint (my mother's cousin) was visiting her grandparents, the Frank Bartletts. I remember visiting there when I was young but never made a family connection. And then there was Cleo Russell who was postmistress when I was young, and the Tibbetts, the Clifford Merrills, the Twaddles, Dr. Brown, that I knew personally and others like Professor Hanscom and Wilbur Yates, and I could go on who my mother and grandmother knew and because of that I felt I knew them. What a nostalgia trip that page was for me. I was also amused, and felt somewhat akin to the person who wrote that the Vales were "very anxious" to have son, Fritz, return to his teaching position. How many times I have seen something in print that did not quite come across as I meant it and I go "Ouch" and cringe. There is something about the printed word that makes a sentence or a thought stand out so one tries to look at every way it could be interpreted but occasionally one still misses.

Reading about Wilbur Yates visiting from Presque Isle makes me wonder what a trip from there was like back in 1908. It takes about seven hours now, even with the interstate where in spite of speed limits no one seems to go slower than 70-75, especially after Bangor because the traffic really thins out from there to Houlton. I don't know how many miles an hour autos could go when it was 1908, but the highest speed limit I can remember was 40 mph when I was a child. It then increased to 45 mph and during the war there were very few autos due to the gasoline rationing. We probably were more healthy then, as most of us walked or biked. I was lucky enough to get my bike before the war, I got it long before I could ride it because then there were not so many choices as to sizes. Metal got scarcer as the war progressed, so I would assume bikes were harder to obtain, but I don't know for sure because, as I say, I already had mine. I remember my mother trying to get a new washing machine because she took in laundry and needed one. It was quite a task to get one and then in true American fashion (more is better) she received two within a week or two of each other. Such was life in the '40s.

It certainly has been an interesting week, weatherwise. It has been so warm and muggy the dog comes in from outside and flops down in front of the door as if he can't possibly take another step until he cools off. I was in Norway both Wednesday and Thursday this week, and when I left on Wednesday we were having a shower in Lockes but not in Norway, and Thursday it showered in Norway but not here. Which, considering how dry it is, is only fair I suppose. Marcia says Aroostook County desperately needs rain for the potato fields. They really cannot afford a third year of failed crops. The second year did a few of the farmers in as it was.

My son Ralph is planning to come from his home in Colchester, Vt., this evening (Fri.) to attend the Mills' reunion tomorrow. Marie Mills York and Elinor Mills Murphy have been camping here with their families on Charlotte Cole's camp lot for the past couple weeks. Marie lives in New York and Elinor in New Jersey, and they camp here for a couple weeks each summer. It is really nice for them, and sister Ann Patten gets a chance to see them, as well as brother Burton Mills, and the cousins get to really know each other. So many times families who live so far apart don't have that opportunity.

Many friends and families of Mrs. Colla Gorman and her niece, Mrs. Arlene Tanguay, gathered at the home of Bob and Donna Folsom here recently to honor the birthday of the two ladies.

We were sorry to hear of the death of George Parsons last month in California, near his daughter Terry and family. George, Hope and Terry were residents of Bethel years ago.

Mr. Ronald Wentzell from Cape Cod spent the weekend at the Wentzell cottage. Ray Eichel of Worcester, Mass., also visited his mother there. On Monday, they all enjoyed a lobster feed at Five Islands.

Callers here Wednesday were Herbie and Dottie Adams of Hanover. I rode to Brunswick with Dottie in the afternoon. We arrived there shortly after the storm had done its damage.

Callers Thursday here were Ed and Eleanor Frechette, Mrs. Eva Barker and her friend Edna Durgin of Oxford. Hope you got to supper on time, Ed!

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gardner of Waterford were supper guests of the Bill Bancrofts, Wednesday. Praise is the ability to raise your eyebrows instead of your voice.

High Street

West Paris by Russell Yates
Howdy, folks. This has been another real nice Monday, much better than we were expecting after listening to the Weather Man this morning.

Myrna and Bernard White came up last Monday forenoon to return my mower that they had borrowed to use at their camp, and the rest of the truck was loaded with bags of grass that they had saved from mowing the tall grass at their camp on Thompson Lake. We'll use the grass for mulching. They stayed to dinner with us before returning to their home in Auburn.

That evening, Peggy and I attended Ladies Night at Franklin Grange in Bryant Pond. Peggy was asked to take the office of master. Many of the officers were visitors from other Granges. The men just sat back and looked important.

Tuesday afternoon, Lawrence Merrill from South Paris called by and we all three attended the Musical Supper and dance at the American Legion Hall in Locke Mills. We had a good supper and then enjoyed the special acts and the dancing. The special acts consisted of juggling by a 12-year-old boy, who was real good at it. A lady singer entertained us with several songs.

We had an early lunch on Thursday and then went down street, where I had to go to the hospital for more blood tests and then pay a visit to one of my friendly doctors for a checkup.

Peggy's granddaughter, Justine Still and her husband Mike from Georgia arrived in Maine on Friday. They called on us in the late afternoon and then continued on to the camp on McWain Pond, where Russell Merrill lives this summer. Mike is a maintenance foreman for Delta Airlines in Atlanta, Ga., and this was his first trip to the state of Maine.

Saturday morning, Justine and Mike joined us for breakfast. We had freshly made blueberry pancakes with Maine maple syrup and strawberries on them, which they seemed to really enjoy. Peggy and I enjoy them quite often.

From here, the Stills traveled to Bethel, Sunday River Ski Area, and took a trip to the top of Mount Washington.

Saturday evening, Peggy and her friend Lawrence Merrill attended the dance at the Town Hall in Locke Mills.

Yesterday, in the late afternoon and evening, we joined a family party at the camp on McWain Pond in Waterford. The gathering consisted of Justine and Mike Still, Samantha and Tom Murch and baby Joanna from Waterford, Loretta and Emerson Merrill from West Bethel, Peggy and me, and the host, Russell Merrill. It was quite breezy and too cool on the porch, so we gathered inside for supper and the evening.

There will be a dance at the West Paris Grange Hall on Aug. 5.

Don't forget the Musical Supper, special acts, and dancing at the Locke Mills Legion Hall on Aug. 22, to benefit Franklin Grange of Bryant Pond. The proceeds from this supper will be used for repairs at the Grange Hall. A $5 supper ticket lets you enjoy all of the above. Come join us then.

Marsha Baxter of Oxford spent the afternoon on Wednesday visiting at the Lovejoy home.

Saturday, the Lovejoy family attended the P.H. Chadbourne Field Day at Bear Mountain Village in Waterford. Later in the afternoon, the Lovejoy girls went up to visit Jennifer Haverinen on King Hill in South Paris.

Impi and Raymond Mack attended a birthday party for his brother, Russell, recently. This was Russell's 80th birthday and the party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mack in Fryeburg.

Today, the Lovejoy girls will join Jenny Haverinen on a trip to Auburn to see the movie "Pocahontas. They will then go to the home of Jenny Haverinen for a pool party.

Sudbury Canada Days:

'Old Grey Goose' to perform

The musical group, "The Old Grey Goose," will perform on Saturday, Aug. 12, at the 16th annual Sudbury Canada Days, summer heritage festival of the Bethel Historical Society. In concert in the afternoon and conducting a contra dance in the evening, the group specializes in old-time country song and dance music. The appearance of this well-known musical trio is made possible in part by a grant from the Maine Arts Commission and the Hall Memorial Fund of the Bethel Historical Society.

"The Old Grey Goose" performs the old-time country dance music of Maine and the Maritimes, singing and playing fiddles, button accordion, piano, guitar, banjo, harmonica, fiddlesticks and bones. The group teaches the country dances of New England: quadrille, contra, circle, polka, waltz and schottische. In concert, the group also presents stories and songs, some humorous, some historical, depicting life in old New England.

"The Old Grey Goose" has been performing concerts and dances for community groups, festivals, and schools throughout Maine, from Fort Kent to Kittery, for the past 15 years. They have also brought their lively brand of Maine music to audiences throughout New England, the Mid-West, the Southern Mountains, and the Pacific Northwest.

In addition to performing, the group has actively been collecting traditional music throughout the Northeast. By visiting and documenting the work of traditional musicians, singers, storytellers and dancers, "The Old Grey Goose" has expanded its repertoire to include: Downeast fiddle tunes from New Brunswick, songs and dance tunes from the Acadian communities of Northern Maine, ballads and songs from Martha's Vineyard, and waltzes, polkas and schottisches from Maine's Finnish and Swedish communities.

Sudbury Canada Days is a family-oriented event with something for everyone. Activities include the Hall Memorial Lecture, craft demonstrations and exhibits, children's parade, flower show, historical videos, local art show, old-time children's games, farming/logging exhibit, carriage rides, badminton, croquet and horseshoe-pitching tournaments, log driver's bean supper, and an old-time hymn sing at the historic Middle Intervale Meeting House. Anyone wishing further information should call the society at 824-2908.

Lecture on western Maine indians

Emerson W. Baker II, assistant professor of history at Salem State College, will present the fourth annual Hall Memorial Lecture on Aug. 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the meeting room of the Dr. Moses Mason House. This will be the initial event in the annual Sudbury Canada Days, summer heritage festival of the Bethel Historical Society. Professor Baker's topic will be "The Indians of the Saco River and Western Maine."

Currently a resident of Biddeford, Dr. Baker received his B.A. in history at Bates College in 1980, a M.A. in history from the University of Maine in 1983, and a Ph.D. in history from the College of William and Mary in 1986 with a dissertation on the failure of Anglo-Indians relations in early Maine.

The author of a monograph and several articles on the history and archaeology of Maine in the seventeenth century, he also served as managing editor of "American Beginnings: Exploration, Culture and Cartography in the Land of Norumbega." He is currently writing a biography of Sir William Phips.

Professor Baker will discuss the people of this region (today's present Oxford and York counties) from contact with Europeans in the early 1600s to the era of Molly Ockett. Also included in this discussion will be such topics as the fur trade, disease, warfare, and land sales to Englishmen.

This annual lecture is supported by income from the Ralph and Marion Hall Memorial Fund established in 1991 by the trustees of the Bethel Historical Society from a bequest from Marion Hall. Its purpose is to bring an outstanding scholar in New England history to Bethel to discuss some aspect of the region's past. The lecture is open to anyone interested and is free.

The tide recedes, but leaves behind bright sea shells in the sand;
The sun goes down, but gentle warmth still lingers on the land;
The music stops, and yet it echoes on in sweet refrains...
For every joy that passes, something beautiful remains

Eternally grateful that God chose you to be my parents and thankful daily for all the precious memories that time can never erase.

Devoted daughter,
Hope
